| id id3767239020258235696  The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and the Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator is the first ML-based method to successfully model   |       | doc_1           |   | doc_2            |  | decision | id    |
|--|-------|-----------------|---|------------------|--|----------|-------|
| title Fourier Neural Operator for Parametric Partial Differential Equations  publication_date    SupportedSources.ARXIV  | cases | authors         | <ul> <li>Nikola Kovachki</li> <li>Kamyar Azizzadenesheli</li> <li>Burigede Liu</li> <li>Kaushik Bhattacharya</li> <li>Andrew Stuart</li> </ul>  | authors          | <ul> <li>Nikola B. Kovachki</li> <li>K. Azizzadenesheli</li> <li>Burigede Liu</li> <li>K. Bhattacharya</li> <li>Andrew Stuart</li> </ul>   |          |       |
| source SupportedSources.ARXIV  journal None  volume    http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3     http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3     http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3     http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3     http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3     http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3     http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3     id id3767239020258235696     The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation. Darcy flow, and Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-art performance equation (including the turbulent regime). Our Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-art performance and the state of the capacity neural network methods objects and tirst neural operator shows state-of-the-art performance compared to expressive neural operator shows state-of-the-art performance compared to expressive neural operator shows state-of-the-art performance compared to expressive neural network methods objects and tirst neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping shewen finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators directly learn the mapping shewen finite-dimensio |       |                 |   |                  | Allilla Allallukullai  |          |       |
| journal None    volume   |       | publication_dat |   | title            | Fourier Neural Operator for Parametric Partial Differential Equations  |   |       |
| volume  doi  id id3767239020258235696  The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator is the first ML-based method to successfully model  |       |                 |   | publication_date | publication_date   2020-10-18 00:00:00   |          |       |
| doi  wris  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  id  id  id3767239020258235696  The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and the Navier-Stokes equation (including the turbulent regime). Our Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-art performance Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator is the first ML-based method to successfully model   |       |                 | None  | source           | SupportedSources.SEMANTIC_SCHOLAR  | al       |       |
|  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3   id id3767239020258235696  The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-armic equation (including the turbulent regimes). Our Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-armic equation (in |       |                 |   | journal          | ArXiv  |          |       |
| • http://arxiv.org/abs/2010.08895v3 • http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3 • http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3 • http://arxiv.org/pdf/2010.08895v3  id id3767239020258235696  The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and the Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator is the first ML-based method to successfully model  |       | doi             |   | volume           | abs/2010.08895   |          | S 289 |
| id id3767239020258235696  The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and havier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator is the first ML-based method to successfully model  The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and the Navier-Stokes equation, Darcy flow, and the Navier-Stokes equation (including the turbulent regime). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-art performance equation (including the turbulent regime). Our Fourier neural operators shows state-of-the-art performance of the equation of the e |       | urls            | • http://arxiv.org/abs/2010.08895v3   |                  | https://www.semanticscholar.org/paper/2f7dc1ee85e9f6a97810c66016e09ffeed684f03   |          |       |
| The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator is the first ML-based method to successfully model  |       | id              | id2767220020258225606   | id               | id-4621747468948422099   |          |       |
| turbulent flows with zero-shot super-resolution. It is up to three orders of magnitude faster compared to traditional PDE solvers. Additionally, it achieves superior accuracy compared to previous learning-based solvers under fixed resolution.   |       |                 | The classical development of neural networks has primarily focused on learning mappings between finite-dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and Navier-Stokes equation. The Fourier neural operator is the first ML-based method to successfully model turbulent flows with zero-shot super-resolution. It is up to three orders of magnitude faster compared to traditional PDE solvers. Additionally, it achieves superior accuracy compared to previous learning-based |                  | dimensional Euclidean spaces. Recently, this has been generalized to neural operators that learn mappings between function spaces. For partial differential equations (PDEs), neural operators directly learn the mapping from any functional parametric dependence to the solution. Thus, they learn an entire family of PDEs, in contrast to classical methods which solve one instance of the equation. In this work, we formulate a new neural operator by parameterizing the integral kernel directly in Fourier space, allowing for an expressive and efficient architecture. We perform experiments on Burgers' equation, Darcy flow, and the Navier-Stokes equation (including the turbulent regime). Our Fourier neural operator shows state-of-the-art performance compared to existing neural network methodologies and it is up to three orders of magnitude faster compared |          |       |
| versions   |       | versions        | porters under investigation.  |                  |  | 1        |       |